The rationality of suicide is an ancient and perennial issue. Epictetus, the ancient Greek Stoic philosopher, noted that suicide can be a reasonable option if suffering becomes unbearable or if life becomes pointless, using the metaphor that “the door is open.”. Hamlet mused about suicide in his famous soliloquy: “To be or not to be: that is the question.

This chapter examines different types of suicides and the varying contexts and reasons behind individual decisions to commit suicide. Among the various types examined are voluntary cessation of eating and drinking (VSED), and people whose suicidality results from reactions to medications. It also analyzes situations commonly misinterpreted as genuinely suicidal, including “chronic ...
